

Menlo Labs Threat Bulletin

Bulletin: 2022—015

Date: 27/10/202

Name: Qakbot

Classification: Banking Trojan

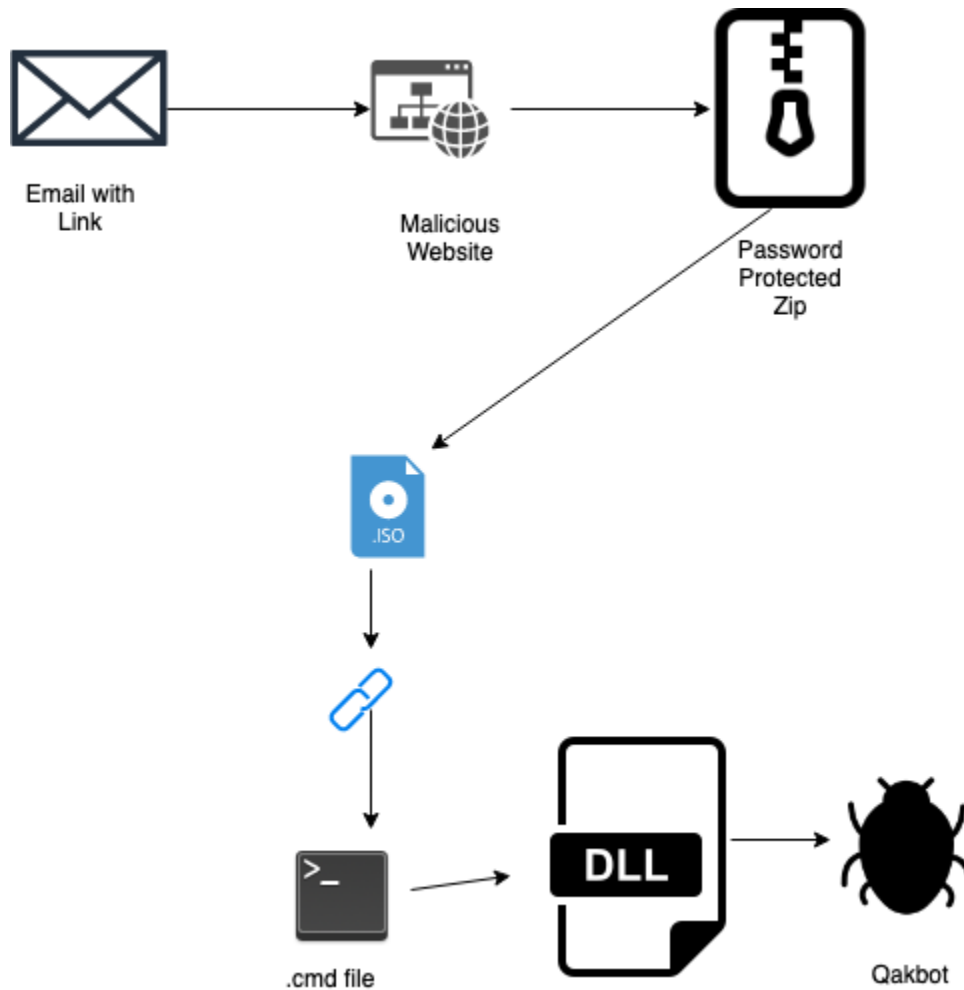

Summary

Menlo Labs has been tracking the latest developments of Qakbot and identified a new campaign.

QakBot, also known as QBot, is a banking Trojan that has existed for over a decade. It was found in the wild in 2007 and since then it has been continually maintained and developed. QakBot has become one of the leading banking Trojans around the globe. Its main purpose is to steal banking credentials (e.g., logins, passwords, etc.), though it has also acquired functionality allowing it to spy on financial operations, spread itself, and install ransomware in order to maximize revenue from compromised organizations.

Attack kill chain

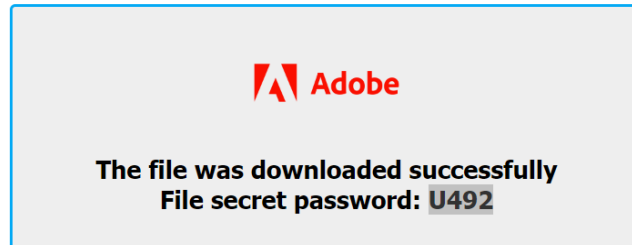

The depiction of the attack kill chain of the latest Qakbot campaign is shown below

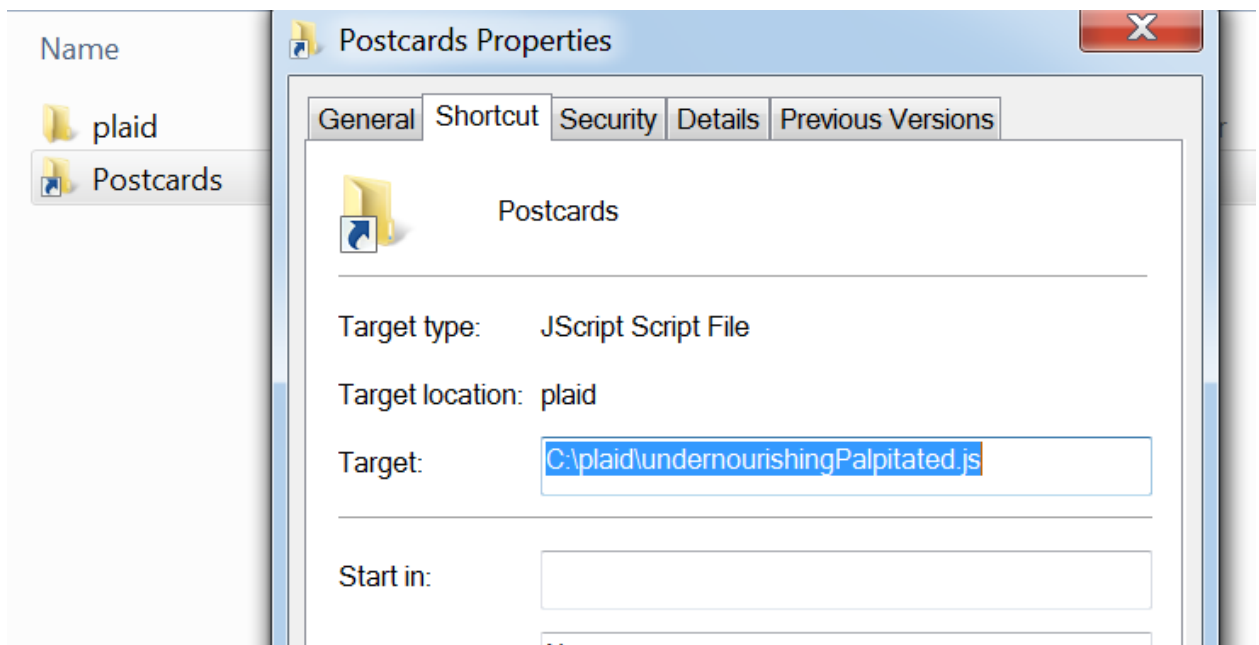

The attack kill chain of this campaign is as follows:

1. The attacker sends a link via email that redirects to a malicious landing page.
2. Upon landing on this page, the victim is presented with an image of the Adobe logo with file secret password and download password protected zip.

info.org/ueo/toeil

3. The downloaded "CA12936316.zip" contains a malicious ISO file "Postcard#8812.iso".
4. Upon providing the password and opening the zip file, the Postcard#8812.iso file automatically executes the undernourishingPalpitated.Ink file.

5. The Postcards.Ink file further executes a JS file "undernourishingPalpitated.js", which further runs the topsHassock.cmd file and loads northernmost.db (Qakbot dll).

6. Apart from undernourishingPalpitated.lnk, topsHassock.cmd and northernmost.db files, the other files and folders inside the ISO file are not used during the execution.

Menlo Protection and Policy Recommendations

The Menlo platform provides security against zero days and new malware campaigns by opening documents in a “safe” mode and letting the customer download a safe version of the document.

In addition to the above functionality, the platform has multiple content inspection engines that analyze and block such threats from reaching the endpoint. Attackers very often use encrypted archives to circumvent existing solutions. The Menlo platform opens up encrypted documents and archives in cloud containers, away from the endpoint. When a password is provided, the contents of the archive or the document are analyzed before letting it through to the endpoint.

Customers can choose to avail the below detection technologies to be integrated into the content inspection engine, providing defense in depth on a single platform.

- AV Engines
- Sandboxes

Menlo labs is monitoring the latest samples and the TTPs used by Qakbot. All the IOC’s in this campaign are added to the product and are now categorized as malware. Customers are recommended to set their policy for threat categories, across browser and application web requests, to block.
